During Sherrin Equipment's recent trip to USA to inspect the progress of the 13 metre Travel Tower at the Dur-A-Lift factory in Iowa, CEO Steven Goulding took time out to call in on the offices of Trade Queensland in Los Angeles, USA.

Trade Queensland had recently been made aware of the activities of Sherrin Equipment's manufacturing and importing business and was keen to explore what possible assistance Trade Queensland may be able to provide to Sherrin Equipment.

The meeting took on greater interest when the ex-Premier of Queensland, Peter Beattie, declared his desire to attend the meeting, joining Stuart Digman, Deputy Commissioner and Tina Radburn Director, Business Development at the Trade Queensland offices in Downtown, Los Angeles.

A very productive meeting took place that saw a short presentation provided to the Trade Queensland group from CEO, Steven Goulding, with ideas exchanged that allowed for a clearer understanding of the Sherrin Equipment business and the role and assistance that Trade Queensland may be able to provide

"The meeting was one of the highlights of our trip" said Steven Goulding. "To be able to meet with Peter Beattie was a great privilege for myself and the Sherrin Equipment business, and is a clear indication of the growing stature of our company, not just in Australia, but now in three countries throughout the world. I was very impressed with Peter and his staff who showed great interest in our business and were extremely personable and professional."

Sherrin equipment has been invited by Trade Queensland to attend a business forum in November between businesses in Australia and the US.
